CITTA-PARIKARMA – A YOGASŪTRA BASED FRAMEWORK FOR PRENATAL EDUCATION

Dr. JAYARAMAN MAHADEVAN
Director, Research Department
Krishnamacarya Yoga Mandiram, Chennai

Vyasa’s commentary to Yogasūtra 1.33 introduces a term called Parikarma for the Citta – वर्त्य विस्मृत्यविश्वेत्यादेशाश्च सूक्ष्म परिकर्म निर्देशते

Parikarma means tools for preparing the mind. It refers to the set of seven methods suggested by Sage Patañjali from Sūtra 1.33 to 1.39. In the context of Yogasūtra, these tools prepare the mind for higher yogic pursuit called Samāpatti (Samādhi).

Interestingly, going by the etymology, the word Samāpatti means becoming/transformation. This seminar is also about a transformation. It is a transformation from womanhood to motherhood. This transformation also needs preparation of various kinds. Mental preparation is the foremost preparation that is required.

The Vedic lore has many interpretations of various layers that include - ādhiyājñika, ādhiḍaliva, ādhibhautika and ādhyātmika strata. Yogasūtra is not a Vedic text but taking the cue of multiple interpretations from the Vedic interpretations, an ādhiprāsūtika (on the prenatal layer) interpretation is attempted for those Yogasūtras which are aimed at providing guidelines for mental preparation for motherhood.

The very definition of a Sūtra also accommodates or validates this kind of an interpretation. Of the six characteristics of a Sūtra “viśvatomukham” is the fourth character – Sūtra is that which has multiple facets or dimensions or that which is universal (the other five are alpākṣaram asandigdham, sāravat, astobham, anavadyam). A Sūtra is multi-layered and universal and hence a dimension or facet that is applicable to the context of prenatal education and the mind associated therein is attempted here.

The seven Parikarma Sūtras (1.33 to 1.39) in a way present seven check boxes. By checking those boxes, a would-be-mother can feel assured that she is going through the right kind of mental preparation that is prescribed by the highly respected Sage Patañjali whose teachings are now embraced by the entire universe with open arms.

It is very well known that citta-kṣobha (afflictions of the mind) and citta-vikṣepa or citta-cāñcalayam (distractions of the mind) are the causes of psychological and psycho-somatic problems which are at the root of sympathetic nervous response. These are, certainly, not desirable to anyone and especially for an expecting mother.

As per the Sūtras, citta-parikarmas prepare the mind by guiding it to a state to citta-prasādanam (pleasant state of mind) and citta-sthairyam (steady state of mind) which are opposites of citta-kṣobha and citta-vikṣepa or citta-cāñcalayam. In scientific terms, it can be stated that Yogic practices lead to para-sympathetic nervous responses.

The summary of the content of the citta-parikarmas, which are proposed to be elaborated with examples during the presentation, is as under -

1.33 – मैथिलिकरुपयुक्तोपेक्षाभ्यासं सुसंयुक्तापुरुषविभिन्न्यायं भवताबिज्ञनकल्लम्
ideal emotional responses situations and individuals

1.34 – प्रमोक्षकोपिक्षारणस्यं वा प्राणस्य
regulation of the breath

1.35 – विषयपत्ती वा प्रमोक्षस्यक्षम मनस्स्व विषयतिनिलक्ष्यो
Conducive/calming Sensory experiences

1.36 – विषयक्षी वा ज्ञातिलम्ब्य avoidance of state of depression by having positive thoughts

1.37 – वीरागविभवं वा विप्रम
Learning about emulate-able personalities or learning from the experiences of elders

1.38 – स्वस्तिनिश्चितस्य वा
Taking note of the dream and deep sleep experiences

1.39 – विषयतियथावापद्य
Allowing the mind to dwell upon/meditate upon desirable objects of focus

These tools, as can be noted, cover a range of activities that influence the mind including – emotional responses, positive thoughts, breath regulation, conducive sensory exposure, sleep and visualizations. These include physiological and psychological factors. Hence, they are multipronged and holistic. Further, support from empirical research on these aspects of prenatal education and ancient wisdom which is available from other texts and experiential teachings of ācāryas like Sri Krishnamacharya can be utilized to make these more effective.

Further, these parikarma-s can also be useful in following ways:

- They can be utilized as a framework or a standard of reference to develop a holistic prenatal education model.
- They can help organize preexisting knowledge on prenatal teachings related to the mind.
- They can be considered as a sound starting point upon which the superstructure of prenatal education can be developed elaborately.
- They can help prepare educational modules as appropriate for the three trimesters of pregnancy – as a preventive strategy.
- They can serve as a range of therapeutic tools that help manage and overcome problems during pre-natal period.

Thus citta-parikarma, promises to be a useful contribution from the Yogasūtras which can open up a lot of possibilities of study, research and application in the field of prenatal education.
